EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Between March and May 2021, the platform experienced massive, fast-growing sales. However, we have a major problem with order fulfillment: a large number of orders are being cancelled before delivery. To maximize our profits next quarter, we should focus on fixing our delivery and supply chain networks rather than spending more money on marketing.

KEY INSIGHTS

The sales trend line shows rapid growth every single month, hitting its absolute peak in May. This massive sales volume is almost completely dominated by Lagos, while nearby areas like Ogun and Oyo hold only a tiny fraction of the total market share.

The Business Name chart shows that just two businesses handle the vast majority of our marketplace volume. This leaves our inventory pipeline heavily exposed if either faces supply issues.

RECOMMENDATIONS

Since the top two vendors drive most of our sales, we need to sign solid agreements with them immediately to lock in supply and protect our volume.

We need to set up automated check-ins like an instant WhatsApp message, SMS, or phone call right after an order is placed to confirm pending carts and stop cancellations.

Let’s stop guessing in new areas. Instead, let's take the exact delivery and payment system that is successful in Lagos and use it to grow safely in Ogun and Oyo next quarter.
